Teachers Take to the Streets: An Open Letter to the CM of Gilgit-Baltistan

Before concluding my letter, I confess that my heart bleeds when there is chaos on my soil, unrest in my streets, politics of vested interests in the backyards, and the storm of fighting continues to take a toll on lives and breadwinners. The storms of unrest, whether in the form of protests or conflict among various stakeholders, must subside and cease.

Land Reform Act 2025; Should it be Contested?

In the end, as a son of the soil, I appreciate the efforts of those in the driving seat, those who proposed the idea of land ownership for a decade, within and outside the assembly. There may be shortcomings in the bill, and there are few; all these discrepancies can be removed through mutual consultation and debate. However, it is unfair to reject and oppose the landmark achievement of the elected representatives based on a few shortcomings. I suggest that the opposition propose amendments once the bill becomes law and is practised. The amendments must be incorporated based on their consequences for society and people.

Quelling Dissent; a Pyrrhic Victory

Pakistan is in no way soothing the injured people but adding salt to the injuries of the constitutionally deprived people of GB. Both Islamabad and Rawalpindi should realize to the core that the people have unconditionally acceded to Pakistan, and they have been waiting to get their rewards in return for the love they expressed to the nascent Pakistan. Instead of returning love in the same coin, the state uses brute force to intimidate dissenters.

Thank, But no Thanks!

Most of the problems, the region faces, could have been resolved by now, given that there were strong institutions to cater to the needs of the people. Unfortunately, GB is being ruled by a colonial mentality comprising the federal government and the officers promoted from lower ranks and cadres. The former sends bureaucrats from civil service to govern the region, and, sadly, these CSPs are empowered to an extent where the local elected members are defied with impunity.

GB needs a George Washington

The Independence of GB has been borne out of the gunpowder like other revolutions across the world. Unfortunately, the state is oblivious to this fact and the state is not only turning a blind eye towards what is happening in the region but also bent upon quashing the demands of people. The unfolding of such events is guiding people towards an apocalypse.

Pandemic Forging the Forgotten Multilateralism

Recently, the outbreak of the pandemic coronavirus has made it crystal clear to world leaders that the panacea of all problems lies in multilateralism. World has been turned into a global village, thanks to globalization, and there is no escape from the dangers as long as unilateralism and protectionism are prevalent.

Covid-19 teaches us not to take socialization & planet for granted

Surprisingly, Covid-19 is proving more effective in terms of curbing greenhouse gas emissions. The pandemic has significantly reduced the emission of these gases. Ironically, it has cut emissions at a faster rate than 25 years of climate conservation efforts.

Economic Growth without Distributive Justice Breeds Violence

Economic growth is the harbinger of progress and prosperity. Needless to say, it is to be reckoned that distributive justice must be part and parcel of the distribution process in a society. If there is uneven distribution, inequalities will breed that may lead to rampant violence.
