ABOUT MYSELF

Scholar of History of Science, Health, and Medicine | Colonialism and Imperialism in South Asia. A dedicated researcher specialising in the history of science, health, and medicine, with a focus on colonialism and imperialism in South Asia, particularly Khyber Pakhtunkhwa. I write research articles for local and international journals, contributing original insights to the field of the history of medicine and health. Alongside my academic work, I have extensive volunteering experience. With strong analytical skills and experience working in challenging environments, I excel both independently and collaboratively in research and academic settings.
